

Title	Four Corners Activity
Created by	Jewish Leadership Institute on Disabilities and Inclusion
Intended Audience	This activity was used with professionals at the 2015 Jewish Leadership Institute on Disabilities and Inclusion but can be adapted for a wide variety of audiences
Materials Needed	Flip chart paper (16 sheets, either Post-It or tape to the walls) Markers
Program Description	Post the statements individually around the room; they are to be considered one at a time. Ask the participants a question; place the four statements/answers separately around the room. Ask participants to find the statement that resonates with them the most and have them go to that corner. Once everyone has gone to a corner, ask them to discuss the statement within their groups, and put their responses on the flip chart paper. Ask each group to appoint a spokesperson to share what they have discussed. Question 1: Why should inclusion for people with disabilities be a priority? Diversity of Community We are created B'tzelem Elohim. Personal Health and Wellness Consistent with human rights Question 2: What are the major barriers to inclusion within the Jewish community? It is not a high priority. Not enough money and resources to support it well. People in the community are not ready. People w/disabilities are better off with and/or prefer specialized services. Question 3: The most impactful thing I can do to promote inclusion is Meet with others to find allies. Make plans to change or close segregated services. Focus on my own active leadership. Engage the management team or board of directors. Question 4: Specifically, the next steps my agency or congregations should take is Make physical improvements to our site. Increase Awareness of this issue to our general population. Actively recruit and engage individuals with disabilities. Other
