Discussion Guide: Volunteer & Employment

Expanding Opportunities for All Is Good for Business

Based on the understanding that involving individuals with disabilities as volunteers and employees strengthens organizations, this Discussion Guide will explore the steps necessary to create a welcoming work environment. To learn more about inclusion in the workplace, visit shalomdc.org/workplaceinclusion. As with all disability inclusion work, the voices of those with disabilities are essential to this process.

VOLUNTEER & INTERNSHIP

- W Are there internship or mentoring programs for individuals with disabilities? Is there a process to recruit youth and provide community service hours? Are adults encouraged to volunteer as interns and for all types of lay leadership roles? Have “soft skills” or implicit volunteer skills been identified in a way that can make these skills explicit for a new volunteer? (“Soft skills” are interpersonal skills such as communicating, flexibility, time management, accepting responsibility, follow-through, etc.)
- A Is there a range of tasks and accommodations provided so all can participate? For example, do you offer alternative forms of communication, support staff, or work modifications? Do you have a staff member who can guide the process and provide support as needed? Have transportation needs and accessibility of volunteer sites been taken into consideration?

ACCOMMODATIONS/WORKSPACE

- W Are individuals with disabilities hired in a variety of roles appropriate for their abilities? Do all employees in like positions receive the same compensation and benefits? Have “soft skills” or implicit employee skills been identified in a way that can make these skills explicit for a new employee?
- A Do you provide a range of workplace accommodations? Are your workspaces designed to meet ADA requirements? Reasonable accommodations are changes to the job, the work environment, or the way things are usually done so an individual with a disability can perform the tasks required. Do you require vendors or contractors you employ to be in compliance with American Disability Act (ADA) requirements?
